Overcoming Grief and Loss
Welcome to Overcoming Grief and Loss

We will not emerge from this journey unchanged.

Losing someone or something dear to us is an experience that we all face at some point in our lives. The thoughts and feelings that follow often lead us into painful times of grief in which we find ourselves navigating uncharted emotions – seemingly alone, without a map or compass. Yet even as we walk through the darkest nights of our soul, we are not alone (Psalm 27:10) and we do not ‘grieve as those who have no hope’ (1 Thessalonians 4:13).

Jesus is no stranger to suffering; He was not exempt from feeling ‘crushed with grief to the point of death’ (Mark 14:34) during His life on earth. And yet in our deepest sorrow, sometimes we find ourselves struggling not only with the reality of our loss but often, crucially, with our faith in God. It can be in these most painful times that we may feel God is silent, and wonder where He is in our situation.

Even in those searching moments, we remember that from the first pages of Genesis through to the climax of Revelation, the Bible is rich in conversation between God and humankind. God’s Word speaks of relationship, and God wants one with you – whatever is happening in your life.

Overcoming grief and loss is a process, a journey – we overcome not in a single moment of triumph, but gradually, one step at a time. And we will not emerge from this journey unchanged. Whether you are seeking to support someone close to you in their loss, or you are in the midst of your own grief and seemingly hanging on by a mere thread, don’t turn back or let go, but take heart.

God’s promise is that there will be ‘treasures hidden in the darkness’ – that you may know He is the Lord (Isaiah 45:3).

The Overcoming Series is designed to help people like you find God’s help in dealing with the challenges that face us all.

Contained in these little booklets are big truths from God’s Word, guidance on how to pray, and practical suggestions for change. Turn over to begin reading a selection of articles and testimonies written by people who understand what you’re going through and long to help you overcome. Then, starting on page 16, there are 28 readings from Bob Gass, author of The Word For Today, to help you practice new thought patterns and habits day by day for a month. As the Bible says, ‘He who is in you is greater than he who is in the world’ (1 John 4:4). With the help of our great God, you can overcome any challenge you face.

The death of a loved one, the loss of a job or the breakdown of an important relationship – just a few examples of situations in which we might experience loss. Our grief (the physical and emotional responses to that loss) is never far behind and often even thinking about ‘making a start’ when it comes to grieving can feel utterly overwhelming.

Speaking of the tragic loss of his mother, wife and child in one fatal car accident, Jerry Sittser writes, ‘I thought that I was going to lose my mind ... The foundation of my life was close to caving in.’ Yet as he unpacks his grief in the book A Grace Disguised, he goes on to conclude, ‘The experience does not have to be the defining moment of our lives. Instead the defining moment can be our response to the loss.’

Psychiatrist Elisabeth Kübler-Ross helped to give definition to the various stages of grief and loss, including Denial, Anger, Bargaining, Depression and Acceptance. But while her research continues to influence the caring profession, in her final book before her own death in 2004 she wrote this about the stages:

‘They were never meant to help tuck messy emotions into neat packages. They are responses to loss that many people have, but there is not a typical response to loss, as there is no typical loss. Our grieving is as individual as our lives.’

And so, acknowledging that there is no blueprint for grief, how will we then respond? In our anguish, confusion and despair everything within us desperately seeks to disconnect on every level. Yet as we grapple with our loss we realise that what we intensely need is the exact opposite – to connect: with the loss; our emotions; our community and most of all with God. This can be our defining moment: that we choose to work through our grief, rather than doing our best to work around it. The latter may leave us feeling disconnected and unsatisfied but the former, however painful, will take us on a journey of connection, allowing the pull of hope to draw us ever on in our journey of healing.

And God’s promise to us in the midst of our loss? That He will bestow on us ‘a crown of beauty instead of ashes, the oil of joy instead of mourning, and a garment of praise instead of a spirit of despair’ Isaiah 61:3 (NIV). And so we begin with a choice because, as Pastor of Willow Creek Community Church, Bill Hybels, once said to his congregation, ‘When it comes to grief the one thing that we cannot do is nothing’.

Step by step

Your guide to overcoming the pain of grief and loss with God’s help

1. CONNECT: to the loss

   ‘In choosing to face the night, I took my first steps into the sunrise’

   - Jerry Sittser

   The choice to connect or disconnect is present right from the start. The rawness of a recent grief and the immediate impact of a loss can leave us struggling with day-to-day things, let alone the idea of dealing with our pain. Yet as we journey on, we realise that there is a road we are beckoned to travel.

   The first step is a choice – will we stand on the edge of our loss, or enter in to it? Circumstances may thrust us in to the ‘valley of the shadow of death’ but in the throes of grief, you have not lost God and you are not alone. When we fully connect to the loss we prepare to enter in to the darkness, yet we do not go without a light. God promises that He is in this with us in this place (Psalm 23).

   No matter how you are feeling about God, He will never give up on you. Will you give up on God?

   TRY...

   Lay your loss before the Lord. And listen: ‘Let all that I am wait quietly before God, for my hope is in Him.’ Psalm 62:5 (NLT).

2. CONNECT: to God

   ‘You either suffer with God, or without God’ - W. Langford

   As we move to connect with our loss, sometimes we find ourselves grappling with how we feel about God. Is God there? Is God good? The Bible tells us that the answer to both is yes.

   We were always going to face trials in this life (e.g. John 16:33) and in times of grief and loss we need to connect to God, holding tightly to the truths and promises in His Word. If we push into Him with all our fears and doubts rather than pulling away, we stand to encounter the ‘God of all comfort’ (2 Corinthians 1:3 NIV), ‘our refuge and strength, an ever-present help in trouble’ (Psalm 46:1 NIV).

   In every situation God longs to connect with us – and how we need it! In fact, we were made for it (Leviticus 26:12). It can be a struggle to pick up the Bible and pray when things are tough, but don’t give up.

   TRY...

   It can be really helpful to share and pray with a trusted friend who can support you in your walk.

3. CONNECT: to your emotions

   ‘Sorrow is not a state but a process’ - C.S. Lewis

   The human soul has been created with the ability to feel an incredible depth and range of emotion. You only need to open the Scriptures to see men and women pouring their hearts out to God. You were created to feel your feelings, therefore connecting to your emotions is part of the process. Let us not be tempted to burying our feelings, nor attempt to fast-forward uncomfortable emotions as quickly as possible. Don’t worry about what you ‘should’ be feeling – your journey through grief will be as unique as you are. Allow yourself the time and space to connect with each emotion and for it to be felt to the full until it naturally fades and the next one emerges. Be kind to yourself.

   You may find it helpful to keep an honest journal of your progress – a place to pour out the many and varied emotions you may have at any given time as words or pictures.

   TRY...

   You either suffer with God, or without God.

4. CONNECT: to community

   ‘...the life-changing events that stand out are often simple experiences of somebody’s care’ - Dr L. Crabb and Dr D. B. Allender

   We were never designed to make it alone (Genesis 2:18). While we will of course need time to ourselves, we should also be aware of remaining connected to others at crucial times of grief and loss in our lives. God intends for us to be connected to community in the good times and the bad. It can be tempting to isolate ourselves when we are hurting, but the Bible instructs us to ‘weep with those who weep’ (Romans 12:15 NLT) which means that there is a two-way responsibility: to be involved in supporting those who are suffering and to allow others to support us when we are face to face with grief.

   Sometimes it is easier to give than receive that support, but accepting (and sometimes asking for) help is a great opportunity to allow yourself to be cared for in practical ways by the community around you. Asking for help is not a sign of weakness. Philippians 1:30 says, ‘We are in this struggle together’ (NLT).

   When a close friend asks ‘How are you?’, try allowing yourself to answer the question with honesty.
5. CONNECT: to hope
‘Earth has no pain that Heaven cannot heal’ - Anon

Biblical hope stems from the root of the Hebrew word ‘trust’ describing ‘a strong and confident expectation.’ This kind of hope changes things. It can influence our views, values and actions, going hand in hand with every stage of our journey to connection. Hope is not always a feeling. Hope is for the times when we do not yet have what we long for; when we are not who or where we want to be. Connecting to hope is about confidently expecting that there is good to come, healing to come, restoration to come – both here and in heaven where there will be ‘no more death or sorrow or crying or pain’ (Revelation 21:4 NLT).

After wrestling all night with God, Jacob proclaimed ‘God has made me fruitful in this land of my grief’ (Genesis 41:52 NLT) and this can be our experience too as we grieve as one who has hope. The good news is that in the depths of despair, we have to lift our heads only a little to look up.

Keep hoping. Try turning yourself and your situation to God, to see what good He can make of it (Romans 8:28.)

TRY...

Keep hoping. Try turning yourself and your situation to God, to see what good He can make of it (Romans 8:28.)

Do’s and Don’ts when grief strikes

Do...
- give yourself and people you care about time and permission to grieve in your and their own way
- sort out the different problems associated with grief, and handle those easily remedied first
- talk about the loss and encourage others to do so
- draw on relationships with friends and family
- consider joining a support group
- find ways to celebrate your loss especially on birthdays and key anniversaries
- turn to God in the knowledge that He knows and understands what you are going through

Don’t...
- assume there is a right and wrong way to grieve
- be pushed or pressured to stop grieving. You will know when it’s time to move on
- be silenced by the loss. Talk about it openly with family and friends
- punish yourself or things you could have done or did not do
- tell someone who is grieving that you know how they feel
- worry if some attributes of a person’s grieving makes you uncomfortable
- take over the grieving person’s life
- stop visiting and seeing the grieving person
- preach at them
- tell them to call or come over anytime unless you mean it
- cut yourself off from family, friends, church or God

Practical: Understanding the grieving process

Grief and loss can come in any stage of life. The death of a pet or losing a job can cause a person to grieve. Grief is associated with any kind of loss and can vary in length and intensity. It can be said that grief is a part of the healing process following a traumatic experience. An individual may experience several stages during their period of grief.

Generally speaking, the stages of grief are:

1) shock or disbelief that the loss has occurred
2) denial, in which the person refuses to accept the loss has occurred
3) bargaining, in which the person attempts to reconcile the loss by making deals with other people, and even with God
4) guilt, often marked by statements of ‘if only I ...’
5) anger, sometimes directed toward the lost person, or God
6) depression, which may come and go throughout the grief process.
7) resignation usually follows – a sign that the loss has been accepted and the person is ready to move on
8) acceptance, and understanding that life will never be the same although it can go on with meaning and hope
The grief felt at losing a loved one can overwhelm even the most grounded adult. So imagine what it must be like learning to cope with bereavement as a young child. That was the challenge facing the team behind a church-led community project based in Niddrie, a deprived part of south east Edinburgh.

Having established a community café to provide affordable meals for more than 100 local residents each day, Richmond Craigmillar Church discovered a large number of grieving families with little or no support. Young children in particular lacked a place to talk about and work through the process of the grief they were feeling at the loss of a mum, a dad, or a sibling.

‘Some of these children had seen terrible sights, which even an adult would find hard to cope with,’ explains Church of Scotland minister Rev Liz Henderson, who began the project in 2003. ‘Some had found their parent dead and been the only person in the house.’

After training in bereavement counselling and play therapy, and with the help of experienced health and childcare officers, Liz set up the project which she named Richmond’s Hope. They welcomed children as young as four, giving them an opportunity to express their hurt and deal with feelings of guilt that often follow the death of a family member or someone close to them.

Through specialised workbooks, fun play areas, dedicated one-to-one sessions and many other creative techniques, staff began to see real change in the lives and behaviour of children struggling to cope with loss.

The first of many children to receive help was eight-year-old David. Since the death of his brother in 1998, David’s behaviour had changed for the worse. In 2001, David’s parents brought him to a church music club where he met Jessie Douglas, another of the project’s original team. Jessie used the experience of losing her son in a motorcycle accident to help David come to terms with his brother’s death.

Richmond’s Hope has grown beyond its founders’ own expectations. It now offers a city-wide service to churches and communities across Edinburgh and the Lothians, and is the UK’s only child bereavement centre open all year round. It also won the Spring Harvest Faithworks Award for excellence in community development.

Staff see spiritual questions as very important in the child’s understanding of death. ‘Amidst the hurt and suffering of a deprived community, this church has combined inspirational faith with practical help and produced remarkable results,’ comments staff member Donna Hastings.

The dedicated work of Richmond’s Hope is producing more than just good results; it is producing changed lives.

Loss and Grief: MY STORY

By Margaret Silvester, Ellel Ministries

Loss can happen very suddenly and unexpectedly and you have no time to prepare for it. Initially you can't grasp the finality of what has happened.

As a young mum I was expecting a much longed-for second child. Due to negligence by medical professionals she was stillborn and I was devastated. She was perfect, just not breathing. We named her Julie. Initially I was in a state of shock and unreality until grief overwhelmed me. My heart was broken and I was consumed with guilt.

The lack of assurance that Julie was in heaven was the hardest thing for me to bear. Months later at a concert, God spoke directly to my heart through a song: 'He's got that little tiny baby in His hands.' Peace flooded me. I knew beyond doubt that I would see her again in heaven. I released Julie to my loving Heavenly Father and painfully forgave those responsible for her death.

Thirty years later, my daughter lost a baby boy at only 13 days old and a little later a baby boy was born to her stillborn. As I spent time with her, comforting her and sharing her heartbreak and tears, my heart was filled with deep compassion for her. I would gladly have lifted her pain and her sorrow and made them mine. That is exactly what Jesus has done – He took our grief and our sorrows and made them His very own when He died on the cross.

In pastoral ministry I have been alongside many other people in times of loss and grief – parents who have lost children, children who have lost parents; husbands who have lost wives, wives who have lost husbands. And of course loss isn’t only about bereavement. Grief can come through the loss of a job, a home, a friendship, a pet or the heartbreak of divorce.

I have learned that grief is a process, a long journey down a rough road with bends and turns. As you start the grief process you don't know how long it will take, or how dark it will be. It can't be hurried; it has to be worked through. It is different for each person; there is no pattern to follow.

To move on with life, I had to come to the point when I could release the loss and the past to God. I realised that finding hope again could not be dependent on my circumstances changing, but on the unchangeable character of God and His expressed love to me. From remembering this I was able to draw inner peace and strength and sense that there were good things ahead.

Through loss and grief we have to trust in God in a new way, because we come face to face with circumstances we can’t fix ourselves. Some things we will never understand, but our loving Father assures us that ‘in all things God works for the good of those who love Him, who have been called according to His purpose’ (Romans 8:28).

Advice and Guidance

Many people offer support to those experiencing a personal crisis or the effects of loss. If you begin to feel unable to cope, overwhelmed, are feeling depressed, anxious or having trouble sleeping, seek help.

Speaking to someone else about your situation is a great first step, but in time you may find professional counselling is needed to move forward.

Counselling help can be found through your GP or local health service. Christian counsellors can often be found through your church leader or the Association of Christian Counsellors (see below).

14 Overcoming Grief and Loss

Overcoming Grief and Loss 15
Your 28 Days of Change

God’s spirit is in you and...

‘He who is in you is greater than he who is in the world’

Overcoming Grief and Loss

It takes time to change long-standing thought patterns, habits and behaviour. We need to keep coming before God in our brokenness and ask for His help.

The rest of this Overcoming booklet is designed to help bring you before God for the next 28 days – to learn from His wisdom in His Word and to access His healing power through prayer.

Make a decision to set aside the time each day to read and respond in prayer. Don’t worry if you miss a day or two, just pick up wherever you left off.

Keep a notebook and pen nearby to jot down anything that occurs to you while you read, or quotes that inspire you to think differently. Trust that God will speak to you personally about your healing over the coming weeks.

Remember, Jesus is on your side, willing you to succeed. Right now, He is praying to the Father on your behalf.

The enemy will do everything he can to keep you from reaching this place, and once you’re there, he’ll do everything in his power to keep you from staying too long. The reason is that he knows that in this place you’ll find answers – real solutions to the problems you’re facing. You’ll also find empowerment.

After Moses had been there, his appearance changed, his words were more effective and he was able to offer God’s people real direction. Yet before he found it, he was no different from anyone else.

In this place he also found rest. Listen: ‘My Presence will go with you, and I will give you rest’ (Exodus 33:14 NIV). When you get overloaded, your vision gets blurred and you become resistant to the very ideas you need because you just can’t handle any more. What’s the answer? Listen again: ‘There is a place near Me.’ Make the passion of your life to find this place and live in it!

STANDING AT GROUND ZERO, a Christian fire fighter, the only Twin Towers survivor from his fire station, asked, ‘How can I ever forgive those who did this?’ He’d attended more funerals in two weeks than most of us will in a lifetime. Is God angry when we struggle with honest emotions like hate or fear? No, until we come to grips with the enormity of our loss and the injustice done to us, we’re not ready to forgive.

Indeed when we rush to forgive, we forgive only in part and we’re released only in part. Jesus said, ‘Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted’ (Matt. 5:4). Until you embrace the one, you can’t experience the other. It’s not time that heals, it’s insight! We all know people who were wounded 20 or 30 years ago, whose wounds are still as fresh today as ever.

As God’s children, we’re not exempt from the stages of grief: a) denial – ‘It’s not real, it can’t be happening’ b) anger – ‘It’s not fair. Why is God letting this happen to me?’ c) bargaining – ‘I’ll do anything; just make it go away’ d) depression – silence and withdrawal, and finally, e) acceptance, when we’re ready to pray, ‘Not my will but Thine be done.’ Whether it’s the loss of your child, your marriage, your job, your health, or anything else You value, it’s in turning to God that receive the grace to embrace it, grieve it, express it, release it and then ‘go from strength to strength.’

I thank You, God, that You care enough about me to provide a resting place for me near You. I ask Lord, during the times of my anger, that I would find forgiveness, and through the times of denial and depression, that You would just walk with me until I find that oasis of acceptance and peace. Amen.

Dealing with grief

When they walk through the Valley of Weeping, it will become a place of refreshing springs’ Psalm 84:6 NLT

The daily readings are written by Bob and Debby Gass, authors of The Word For Today, and originally appeared there first. Over a million people around the world read Bob and Debby’s warm, encouraging words each day.

You can receive a quarterly copy of The Word For Today free of charge – see the back page for more details.
BEWARE of a half-baked ‘theology of denial’ that leaves you spiritually and emotionally crippled for life. What we don’t deal with now will deal with us later in harmful ways. When we stuff things into our emotional rubbish bin, we end up squandering precious time and energy sitting on the lid, trying to keep the contents from spilling out. Jesus said, ‘You shall know [embrace] the truth [even its painful aspects] and the truth shall make you free’ (John 8:32 NKJ).

In A Better Kind of Grieving, Bill Hybels writes, ‘Fifty years ago industrialists thought they could just bury toxic waste and it would go away. We’ve since learned it doesn’t. It leaks into the water, contaminates the crops and kills animals. Burying grief does the same thing. It leaks into our emotional system and wreaks havoc. It distorts our perceptions of life and taints our relationships.’

Hybels continues, ‘When my father died, I replaced the pain real fast. I think I missed only four days of work. I just substituted my feelings of loss and disappointment with a frenzied ministry schedule. I ran from it. That was a bad move for me and for those around me.’

Are you running from pain today? Are you trying to trade it in prematurely for some other feeling? That’s not God’s way. Listen: ‘Now is your time of grief, but I will see you again and you will rejoice, and no one will take away your joy’ (John 16:22 NIV).

THE PROCESS OF BECOMING WHOLE involves: a) feeling deeply, b) dealing honestly, and c) making way for healing. Sometimes we try to find ‘quick relief’ by releasing it before we’ve gone through it. We do that because we fear the process. We run from the pain or try to replace it with another feeling as soon as we can. Sometimes we use alcohol, drugs, sex, money or work. But that only makes it worse!

With God’s help, you can feel the pain, let it go, and move forward. Listen: ‘Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning’ (Psalm 30:5). You must go through one in order to get to the other.

Moses was the greatest leader Israel ever had. His death was an unspeakable loss. Together God’s people wept on the Plains of Moab. For 30 days and nights God stood by, allowing them to mourn in a healthy expression of grief. No hugging, no divine censure, no denial. Only when God saw that they had completed the process did He tell Joshua to lead them forward. They had to go through to get through! We all do!

Listen: ‘After the death of Moses … the Lord spoke to Joshua … Be strong and of good courage … do not be afraid, nor be dismayed, for the Lord your God is with you wherever you go’ (Joshua 1:1-9 NKJ). The God who spoke those words is your God!

Prayer Point

Lord, there are times when I don’t want to confront the pain; I just want it to go away. I pray that any grief I have buried, You will help me to deal with and bring me to a place of healing and freedom so I can look to the good times ahead and not the pain of the past that has trapped me for so long. Amen.

Do it again, Lord! ‘Won’t You revive us again, so your people can rejoice in You?’ Psalm 85:6 NLT

AFTER the terrorist attacks on America on September 11, Max Lucado wrote: ‘Dear Lord, as the innocent are buried, our innocence is buried as well. We thought we were safe; we should have known better but, we didn’t. We don’t ask You for Your help, we beg You for it! We know what You can do. We’ve read the accounts, pondered the stories and now we plead, “Do it again, Lord.” Remember the Hebrews in Egypt? You protected their children from the Angel of Death. We have children too, Lord! You took Daniel the captive and made him a King’s counsellor. You took Peter the fisherman and made him Peter the apostle. David went from leading sheep to leading armies. Do it again, Lord, for today we need counsellors … apostles … leaders.

‘At Calvary, You saw innocence slaughtered, goodness murdered … mothers weeping … evil dancing, heaven’s sweetest song buried beneath a rock. But You turned the darkest Friday into the brightest Sunday … Grant us a September Easter.

Thank You for these hours of unity; Christians praying with Jews; Republicans standing with Democrats. Skin colour covered by the ash of burning buildings. The enemy sought to bring us to our knees and succeeded. He had no idea that we would kneel before You! Grant those who lead us, wisdom. Have mercy on the souls who have departed and the wounded that remain. Give us grace that we might forgive and faith that we might believe. Look kindly on Your church. For two thousand years, You’ve used her to heal a hurting world. Do it again, Lord. Do it again!’

Prayer Point

Do you have a ‘why’?

‘I consider that our present sufferings are not worth comparing with the glory that will be revealed in us’ Romans 8:18

WHEN VIKTOR FRANKL was sent to Auschwitz, he’d been researching a book on finding life’s meaning. But when his clothes were suddenly taken from him, including the manuscript he’d hidden in his coat lining, he questioned whether his life had real meaning at all. Then something happened: the Nazis gave him the rags of an inmate who’d just been sent to the gas chamber and Frankl found in the pocket a page containing a Jewish prayer (from Deuteronomy 6:4–5): ‘Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is one God. And you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might.’

‘How should I interpret such a coincidence?’ he asked himself, ‘Other than to live my thoughts instead of merely putting them on paper?’ Later he wrote, ‘Nothing in the world will so effectively help you to survive as the knowledge that there is a purpose to your life. He who has a ‘why’ to live for, can bear almost any ‘how.’

Charles Dickens was lame. So was Handel. Homer was blind. Plato was a hunchback. Sir Walter Scott was paralysed. Paul spent all but seven years of his ministry in prison. What gave each of these people the stamina to overcome their circumstances? Purpose! Each of them had a dream, fuelled by a fire within that could not be extinguished. They had a ‘why’ that was bigger than every ‘how.’ Do you?
Overcoming Grief and Loss 21

Satan’s Goal was to infect Adam before his first son was born—that way he could contaminate all the rest of us. And it almost worked! Cain, his firstborn, murdered his brother Abel. But God wasn’t finished with Adam yet. Listen: ‘Adam knew his wife again and she bore him a son and named him Seth, “For God has appointed another seed for me instead of Abel, whom Cain killed”’ (Genesis 4:25 NKJ).

How wonderful! For everything you’ve loved and lost, God has another seed. For everything that has died or been stolen from you, God has another seed. You see, your seed is your future and God has another one for you to birth. He has another miracle for you to hold. Where you are right now is not where you’re going.

The devil knew God had a plan for you; that’s why he worked so hard to wipe you out. He didn’t want you to live long enough to receive what God had in mind. But he failed, didn’t he? The very fact that you’re still here says that God’s not through with you yet.

Start looking ahead—there’s something coming up on God’s calendar that’s got your name on it. ‘God hath appointed...’ There’s something good just over the horizon; something good for your life... your marriage... your family... your career... your ministry. If you are not on your deathbed, then God still has an appointed task for you to finish. Get up! Get going! He’s called you with an eternal purpose!

On September 11, 2001, a mother told her four-year-old that his dad, a New York City cop, wouldn’t be coming home that night because he’d gone to Heaven. ‘Can we call him on his mobile phone?’ the child asked. ‘No, but some day we’ll go to see him,’ she replied. After a pause the four-year-old looked up and asked, ‘Mommy, what’s Heaven like?’ Multitudes ask that question. Who’s qualified to answer it? Jesus! Listen: ‘In My Father’s house are many mansions... I go to prepare a place for you’ (John 14:2 NKJ).

What’s Heaven like?

Like moving into a part of your heavenly Father’s house, specially prepared for you. No renovating, no parts unfinished, no disappointments on moving day. What will we do there? Serve God day and night (Revelation 7:15). Doing what? Ruling angels. Being responsible for whole cities. Will we know our loved ones? Would we know less in Heaven than we did on earth? ‘... face to face ... then shall I know even as also I am known’ (1 Cor. 13:12 KJV). Will our children still be children and our parents still be old? No. ‘... when He appears, we shall be like Him ...’ (1 John 3:2 NIV) Jesus, who left us at 33.

What about the physically challenged? Listen: ‘...our present sufferings are not worth comparing with the glory that will be revealed in us ... as we wait eagerly for our adoption as sons, the redemption of our bodies’ (Romans 8:18-23 NIV). Joni Eareckson Tada says, ‘That will be the day after my death when I, the quadriplegic, will be on my feet dancing!’ Heaven will be wonderful! Are you going?
Grief and Loss
Overcoming

Prayer Point
Will we have time for leisure and perspective! Or travelling, not at the speed of light, compared to what you’ll learn there. Imagine the structure of an atom will be child’s play on earth, except without your earthly body. That be as much God’s child in Heaven as you are died hundreds of years before (Mark 9:4). You’ll recognised Moses and Elijah even though they’d their earthly bodies? [transformed] …’ (1 Corinthians 15:51 NIV).

Our prayer point today is on a page.

Prayer Point
Lord, I yearn for a day when there will be no stress or worry. Yet I realise today I can live a life that will release all the grief and pain in my life. I choose today to have that appointment with You, that moment where it’s You and me, where nothing comes in between. Thank You, Amen.

Divine appointment
‘In my Father’s house are many mansions.’
John 14:2 NKJ

I am ashamed to admit it, but I’m a little scared. I really like this world – how can I adjust to somewhere so different? This world is like a womb. Just as a baby is contained in his mother’s womb, so we are bound by the limitations of this life. Maybe the baby would be a little scared leaving the womb. Then death is…? You’ve got it, a journey from earth life to the newness of Heaven life. We’ll go through a tunnel; we may experience momentary struggle, like we did when we were born, but beyond the tunnel is Heaven. Think of holding a hand and finding it’s God’s hand! Of breathing new air and finding it’s celestial air. Of feeling invigorated and finding it’s immortality. Of passing from storm and tempest into unknown calm. Of waking up and finding it’s home. Anybody ever get there by accident? No, it’s by appointment only. Have you made yours yet?

Reach out and touch somebody
‘... we all share the same Spirit’
1 Corinthians 12:13 NLT

Hollywood needed extras, they’d find them in the pews! God said, ‘It is not good that man should be alone.’ Why? Because we’re communal by nature; we need to feel ‘connected.’ This applies not only to marriage and family, but to other close relationships too. We need people to talk to, laugh and interact with. When that doesn’t happen, we’re not strengthened by receiving, and others aren’t blessed by giving.

A note of caution, however: a) never hold others in such high esteem that your fellowship becomes idolatry, b) never worship at the altar of their opinions in order to stay in their good graces, and c) never be intimidated into being anyone other than the person God made you. Having realised that, reach out – the help you need is available today.
Partners in pain

‘The woman was left ... with her daughters in law’
Ruth 1:5-6 KJV

When their husbands died, Naomi, Ruth and Orpah became partners in pain. Unless you’ve been there, you can’t relate to it. It’s a fellowship that transcends age, race, background and status; it brings the oddest people together. When you’re hurting, don’t look for validation from those who haven’t walked in your shoes. People can’t give you what they don’t have. Often the best they have to offer is the kind of optimism that’s glib and quickly becomes annoying.

Until you can start to make sense of your pain and see the greater good in it, you’ll feel like a victim. But once you see God’s grace at work, and His purpose in it all, you can begin to move ahead... to marry, to have another baby, to get another job, to dream another dream, to live again.

 Prayer Point

Thank You, Lord, for the people around me who have been there during periods of pain in my life. Even though I still struggle through issues, Lord, I am not finished yet. Let me dust off some of those past dreams and be determined to see them happen, as all things are possible for those who believe. In Jesus’ name.

Living in war mode!

‘He will renew your life and sustain you in your old age’
Ruth 4:15 NIV

What do you do when you’ve got the wisdom, but not the time, to do it all again? Your window of opportunity seems closed. You’ve still got the desire, but when you look in the mirror, the wrinkles and sags confirm that the clock is against you. Listen to Naomi: ‘Go your way; for I am too old’ ...’ (Ruth 1:2).

She was saying, ‘Don’t hang around waiting for me. My life’s over!’ When you feel as if you’ve run out of time you can get bitter and start pushing people away, especially when it seems they are asking for what you can no longer give. Good news! Just when you think God’s forgotten you and your ‘sell by’ date has expired, He can re-commission you. Oh yes, He can! He’s the God of second chances. With Him you’re never too old!

Listen: ‘So Boaz took Ruth ... and she gave birth to a son. The women said to Naomi: “Praise be to the Lord, who this day has not left you without a guardian-redeemer ... He will renew your life and sustain you in your old age” ... Then Naomi took the child in her arms and cared for him’ (Ruth 4:13–16 NIV).

Biologically, it was impossible for Naomi to give birth to a baby! But when God wants to give something, even if it breaks every rule in the book, He’ll do it. It’s not over until God says it’s over! He can do things you’ve never seen before and can’t even begin to explain. So trust Him!

 Prayer Point

Lord, help me to identify the path and direction I should take when things around me seem to be going wrong. Father, I pray that You will not hinder the lives of the people around me. I pray that You bless me, Lord, and let me be a blessing to others, in Jesus’ name. Amen.

‘Stumbling’ into blessings

‘As it turned out, she was working in a field belonging to Boaz’
Ruth 2:3 NIV

Although Ruth started out for one destination, she stumbled into another. Her plan was to pick leftover grain, but she happened to ‘light on a part of the field’ belonging to Boaz – and it changed her life.

When Boaz called her name, she came from the background to a place of blessing in the foreground. That’s how quickly it can happen! Ruth’s life had been spiralling downward. Her husband had died. She’d left her old home, and wasn’t accepted in her new one. She was in survival mode, making the best of a bad job by glean ing just enough to stay alive. Then God turned things around! The reapers began deliberately dropping handfuls of wheat in her path. She started picking up undeserved blessings.

Did you know that God can leave you ‘a blessings trail’? After struggling so long just to get by, He’ll begin to drop blessings into your path, and all you have to do is keep following. Even though the odds might seem against you today, don’t let satan push you back. You’ve been through too much to be intimidated by him. You’re about to come into a blessing that’ll change your life. ... along unfamiliar paths I will guide them; I will turn the darkness into light before them...’ (Isaiah 42:16 NIV).

God can let you ‘stumble’ into good things, helping you to show up at the right place, at the right time, and meet the right person with the right answer. He has a way of ‘tripping’ us into blessing.
EVEN IN THE MIDST OF PAIN, separation and disappointment, you're still in God's protective custody. With Him nothing 'just happens'. Coincidence is what takes place when He decides to remain anonymous!

Look at Jonah: God sent him to Nineveh, but instead he boarded a ship headed in the opposite direction. Now it 'just happened' that a storm blew up. He was dumped overboard, a great fish swallowed him, threw him up three days later, and the first words he heard when he hit the beach were, 'Go to Nineveh.'

You can go the easy way or the hard way, the choice is yours! One thing is certain – every purpose of God shall be performed!

A little girl was running to get to Sunday school on time, praying, 'Lord, don't let me be late.' Suddenly she tripped, fell and got her dress dirty. Getting back up she brushed herself off and said, 'Lord, You know I don't want to be late, but You don't have to shore!' Sometimes God gives us a shove to: a) get us out of our rut, or b) get us over our fear. That's because He's in charge. He'll 'take you, break you, and make you', in order to carry out His will. Satan has never once been able to abort God's plan. In sickness, poverty, abandonment, betrayal or mistreatment, nothing ever 'just happens'. Behind the scenes, God is orchestrating everything. Romans 8:28 tells us that 'all things work together ... according to His purpose' (NKJ) including the things you're going through right now!

ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 2001, we emailed jokes; on Tuesday, September 11, we did not. On Monday we were secure; on Tuesday we learned better. On Monday, we were talking about our heroes being athletes; on Tuesday, we learned who our heroes really were. On Monday, we were irritated that our tax rebate cheque hadn’t arrived; on Tuesday, we gave money to people we’d never met. On Monday, people were fighting about prayer in school; on Tuesday, you would have been hard-pressed to find a school where somebody wasn’t praying.

On Monday, parents argued with their kids about tidying up their room; on Tuesday, they couldn’t get home fast enough to hug them. On Monday, we were upset about waiting six minutes in a fast-food queue; on Tuesday, we were willing to wait six hours to give blood to the injured and dying. On Monday, we defined each other by race, sex, colour, and creed; on Tuesday, we were all holding hands. On Monday, American politicians argued about budget surpluses; on Tuesday, they stood together on the steps of the Capitol singing, ‘God Bless America.’ On Monday, the President went to Florida to read to children; on Tuesday, he returned to Washington to protect them. On Monday, we had families; on Tuesday, we had orphans. On Monday, people went to work as usual; on Tuesday, they died.

The lessons learned in 24 hours, the things taken for granted, or forgotten, or overlooked, hopefully will never be forgotten again.

I pray that I can give thanks in everything, Lord. Help me to understand that what I go through today may help me or someone else years down the line. Help me to develop grace to get through and a thankful heart.

Jesus at the scene of death

‘Our friend Lazarus has fallen asleep; but I am going ... to wake him up.’ John 11:11 NIV

WHAT DO YOU SAY to those who are heartbroken, angry and questioning because of death? Tell them about Lazarus whom Jesus raised from the dead. Tell them:

1) Jesus allows us to question! Martha asked, in effect, ‘Where were you when we needed you, Lord?’ Was Jesus upset with her? No. In moments like these we learn things about ourselves we never knew before. In times of heartache we discover ‘His compassions fail not. They are new every morning; great is [His] faithfulness’ (Lamentations 3:22–23 NKJ).

2) Jesus shows us how to grieve! ‘Jesus wept,’ not ‘Jesus upset with her? No. In moments like these we

3) Jesus gives us hope! Listen: ‘Lazarus has fallen asleep; but I am going ... to wake him up!’ Know how you feel after a great night’s sleep? Well, multiply that feeling by infinity and you still haven’t come close. ‘Goodnight’ here means ‘good morning’ there. Jesus said, ‘... nor can they die anymore, for they are equal to the angels ...’ (Luke 20:36 NKJ). Wow! The ‘Uppertaker’ puts every undertaker out of business! Don’t you love it?

Prayer Point

Lord, never let me focus on things that don’t matter. Help me, Lord, to connect with those that need something or someone. Help me, Lord, to be a reflection of You, to go and do what others might find beneath them. Help me, Lord, always have time for people. Let my life mean something to others more than it means to me.

Longing for forgiveness

‘If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just and will forgive us our sins’ 1 John 1:9

CHRISTMAS CAN BE A DIFFICULT TIME, especially when you’ve lost a loved one. The sounds and sights that once brought you such joy now remind you of them and reinforce your sense of loss. There is no magic formula; grief is a process you must walk through, and it takes time. Here are some personal thoughts that might help.

Try to keep things in perspective. Christmas is only one day out of 365. You can do anything for 24 hours because God promised that ‘... your strength will equal your days’ (Deuteronomy 33:25 NKJ). Check and see if there’s a needy family or a lonely neighbour who’d enjoy spending an hour with you. Reaching out is difficult, but it brings healing. Don’t accept the myth that everybody else is having ‘a perfect Christmas’ while you struggle. The truth is, even for Christians, Jesus’ birth gets eclipsed by unrealistic demands and the pressures of shopping, entertaining and gift-giving. Why do you think we’re so relieved when it’s all over?

Don’t maintain old traditions if they make you feel worse. Create new ones that work for you now — you might even want to keep them. If you’re struggling with Christmas this year, here’s a prayer for you: ‘Lord, You know how I feel today because Your Word says You are familiar with grief. Heal my heart and fill its emptiness. Become more real to me than the activity without and the loneliness within. Help me to discover You and, in so doing, make this a Christmas like none I’ve ever known. Amen.’

Prayer Point

Lord, I thank You it’s not wrong to be upset or to show emotion. You created that within me. I thank You Lord that even in grief You are there with me, walking through it with me... Thank You, Lord, that I can express to You how I feel in prayer, and You never judge me for that. Amen

He can make it up to you

‘My father and mother walked out and left me, but God took me in’ Psalm 27:10 TM

HAS DEATH OR DIVORCE robbed you of a parent? Are you still grieving for lost hugs and birthdays without bicycles? The loss of these things can cause you to struggle all your life to find your identity. When you grow up listening to endless arguments but never seeing affection, it’s easy to think that’s normal, then later you find yourself asking, ‘How should I act as a parent? And why do I still feel like a lost child?’ David said, ‘My father and mother walked out and left me, but God took me in’ (Psalm 27:10 TM).

How wonderful! God can hold you and heal your pain. When you’re hurting, He can put you on His couch and be your ‘Wonderful Counsellor’ (Isaiah 9:6). When you feel like an orphan, He can be to you an ‘Everlasting Father’ who doesn’t abandon His children, no matter what. With Him you’re always safe and protected, because that’s what loving fathers do. You’re His child, which means if something’s important to you, it’s important to Him too! What’s more, He can send people into your life to who’ll be to you the father, the mother, the brother, or the sister you never had. Listen: ‘God sets the lonely in families ...’ (Psalm 68:6 NW). Don’t be so focused on your losses that you fail to see Him at work, or recognise those He sends into your life to make it better.
A FEW WINTERS AGO in Sweden, an 84-year-old woman sat for two months on her balcony before her neighbours discovered she was dead. They realised something was wrong when they saw her sitting there around the clock, despite the freezing temperatures. One neighbour said, “I feel terrible. I hope this makes us stop and think more about one another.”

In one of the lowest moments in David’s life, he wrote, “Look on my right hand and see, for there is no one who acknowledges me ... I cried out to You, O Lord; I said, “You are my refuge, my portion in the land of the living”” (Psalm 142:4–5 NKJ).

Doctor Philip Zimbardo writes in Psychology Today, “I know of no more potent killer than loneliness. It’s the central agent in depression and suicide. It’s the devil’s strategy for isolating us from one another, while creating the delusion that the reasons are ... time-pressures ...work demands ... or anxieties created by economic uncertainty.”

Jesus heard cries that nobody else heard. He noticed people that others had no time for. When the disciples tried to silence blind Bartimaeus, He stopped them and restored his sight. He walked for days to meet with a hurting woman whose heart was as empty as her water pots (John 4). He’s the Good Shepherd who left 99 sheep in the fold and went out to look for the one that was lost. Do you want to be more like Him? Care about people; let Him love a hurting world through you!
Let Him comfort you
‘Praise be to ... the Father of compassion and the God of all comfort’ 2 Corinthians 1:3 NIV

GOD CAN make you comfortable in the most uncomfortable places. He can pull you out of situations you thought you’d be stuck in forever. He can give you peace even in the midst of trauma. Before your life is over, you will live, love and experience loss. Losing some things will actually help you to appreciate the things you still have. It’s the taste of failure that makes success so sweet. How can you celebrate victory unless you’ve known defeat? You’ll live each day not knowing what tomorrow holds, but knowing that God holds all your tomorrows. They’re not in the hands of your boss, your broker, your friend or anybody else. Nor are they in your hands to manipulate and control.

No, all your tomorrows are in God’s hands! So whatever you do, get to know Him; because you will need Him and He will be there for you. He’ll be there when everybody and everything else has gone. He’ll be there for you in the dark places. His promise to you is, ‘...Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning’ (Psalm 30:5 AMP) – however long the night, morning always comes and with it His joy. Just think, no matter how dark the night, you’ve always lived to see the morning, right? Somehow His grace has protected you, provided for you, secured you, comforted and brought you through. Times and seasons change, but not God. He is always ‘the God of all comfort’ and He’s watching over you today!

Prayer Point
I pray today, Lord, that I might be able to understand more of Your character, more of Your heart and more of who You are; that my relationship with You outgrows my failings and that Your correcting hand would be on my life to bring it in line with Your will. In Jesus’ name, Amen.

Fruitful life
‘No discipline seems pleasant at the time, but painful’ Hebrews 12:11 NIV

WHY would a loving God permit us to experience pain, even a small dose? To get our attention! To bring about change! Listen: ‘God disciplines us for our good’ (Hebrews 12:10 NIV). God’s intention is always to nudge us lovingly, wisely and persistently, toward the life and character we desire but can’t reach without His help. The Bible says, ‘No discipline seems pleasant at the time, but painful. Later on, however, the produces a harvest of righteousness and peace’ (Hebrews 12:11 NIV). The Bible says, ‘If you are without chastening, of which all have become partakers, then you are illegitimate and not sons’ (Hebrews 12:8 NKJ). Today, you can lengthen or shorten the discipline process in your life – it’s entirely up to you!

No, your tomorrows are in God’s hands! So whatever you do, get to know Him; because you will need Him and He will be there for you. He’ll be there when everybody and everything else has gone. He’ll be there for you in the dark places. His promise to you is, ‘...Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning’ (Psalm 30:5 AMP) – however long the night, morning always comes and with it His joy. Just think, no matter how dark the night, you’ve always lived to see the morning, right? Somehow His grace has protected you, provided for you, secured you, comforted and brought you through. Times and seasons change, but not God. He is always ‘the God of all comfort’ and He’s watching over you today!

The cycle of lethargy
‘Go after them. You will surely recover everything that was taken from you!’ 1 Samuel 30:8 NLT

AFTER LOSING EVERYTHING at Ziklag, David could have said, ‘I think I’ll just stay in this cave the rest of my life and let Saul be king.’ Instead, he asked God what his next move should be and God said, ‘Go after them; you will recover everything that was taken from you!’ When David obeyed these words he got back everything he’d lost and re-established his leadership.

Taking action is very powerful! One single step forward can rob failure of its destructive power. The reason failure paralyses us is that we don’t take the time to understand why we failed in the first place and then work to change it. Instead, we wait for some outside force or person to rescue us, when all the time God’s calling us to act. When you’re worried about failing, the worst thing you can do is nothing! Failure can be a tremendous motivator, especially when it drives you to make changes leading to new levels of understanding.

Writing about what he terms the ‘cycle of lethargy’, psychologist David Burns says, ‘When I’m faced with a challenge and do nothing, it leads to distorted thoughts that I’m helpless, hopeless and beyond change. Those in turn lead to destructive emotions; loss of energy and motivation, damaged self-esteem and feeling overwhelmed. The end-result is self-defeating behaviour; procrastination, avoidance and escapism. These negative emotions reinforce one another and the whole cycle spirals downward.’ When you act and win, it’s glorious. When you act and lose, it’s painful, but it’s not failure. Failure is refusing to act at all!

Prayer Point
Lord, I pray that through the times when parts of my life seem as if they are being stripped away, You would truly mould and shape me for the future. I pray that You give me a new sense of purpose. Let me learn about myself in this season, to end up being someone that has a deeper walk with You. Amen.
